

Durable Stainless Steel Drum Handlers are available for your clean environment

More and more companies are demanding high quality drum handlers for use in the clean environments of their food and pharmaceutical companies. In response, Morse offers a myriad of models constructed with type 304 stainless steel. These stainless steel models provide the corrosion resistance, durability, and wash down capability they require.

In addition to the drum handlers shown here, we also offer our drum rotators in stainless steel... and we are always willing to consider custom designs in stainless steel. Please give a call if you have a special application.

A large pharmaceutical and medical technology company recently called Morse to order several hundred stainless steel drum dollies. We referred them to their local Morse Dealer. They needed drums to be highly mobile for use in various locations within their facility. A custom dolly was developed for use with either of the two different drum sizes in their small batch manufacturing processes.

A Stainless Steel Below-Hook Drum Karrier was needed by a seafood processing company in the Miami, Florida area. They inquired through our website, so we contacted his local Morse Dealer with all the details. They determined that Morse model 85i-SS perfectly suited the application. The company bought one in October, and liked it so much, that they bought another in November.

Stainless steel alloys, with their chromium content, have higher resistance to oxidation (rusting) and corrosion because the chromium forms a surface layer impervious to water and air. When the surface is scratched the layer quickly reforms... a phenomenon called passivation. This layer protects the metal beneath and retains the shiny appearance of your stainless steel drum handler.
